

Quick Guide: statutory TB testing requirements for cattle moving to and from agricultural shows

This quick guide explains the pre- and post-movement TB testing requirements for cattle from England moving to agricultural shows in other parts of England, in Wales and in Scotland.

Points to note:

- PrMT = pre-movement TB test
- PoMT = post-movement TB test
- Cattle under 42 days old are not eligible for PrMT
- This information relates to statutory PrMT and PoMT requirements. Please note that some shows require cattle to be PrMT-ed even if it is not compulsory under the legislation, therefore exhibitors are advised to check with the show organiser well in advance of the show
- Cattle moving to shows from herds in the LRA on annual or more frequent surveillance testing are required to PrMT, for example those that regularly source cattle from higher TB risk areas, raw milk producers, or herds subject to radial testing
- Animals subject to compulsory PoMT must not move off the first holding of destination in the LRA until the test is completed with a negative result (unless taken to slaughter either directly or via a slaughter gathering, or to a Licensed Finishing Unit or Approved Finishing Unit)

Exempt agricultural shows for the purposes of PrMT

Cattle may be exempt from statutory PrMT if the movement satisfies both of the following criteria:

- Cattle moving to a show where all bovine animals are present for less than 24 hours on site

And

- for shows in England, no cattle are to be housed i.e. in a covered area with sides (includes marquees)
- for shows in Wales, no cattle are to be housed i.e. in a covered area with or without sides (includes marquees)

A show that does not meet these criteria is referred to as a “non-exempt” show and, depending on the TB surveillance testing frequency of their herd of origin, cattle may need to be pre- and/or post movement tested to attend.

Remember, some shows require cattle to be PrMT-ed even if it is not compulsory under the legislation, therefore exhibitors are advised to check with the show organiser well in advance of the show.
